A big hit with students

The solution from Elavon allows the university to combine the latest technology with the added flexibility of international payments services. The seamless implementation of contactless payments has been a big hit with students, especially for smaller purchases like a cup of coffee in the campus café.

True payment flexibility

With a high number of overseas students paying for university services and courses, a sophisticated eCommerce solution was a must. Elavon's Multi Currency Conversion (MCC) provides multiple payment and settlement options, while Dynamic Currency Conversion (DCC), allows international students and customers to pay in their home currency. The university also benefits as they earn extra revenue by sharing a percentage of the currency conversion rates.

A dedicated payments partner

The university believes that working with a payments partner that puts people first and understands the educational sector has been critical to the success of the project. The Elavon team spent time on campus learning about the university to plan the optimum payment solution. Working closely with key stakeholders, Elavon completed the implementation in just three weeks, ready for the September intake. This included a dedicated authorisation line to help make student enrolment easier during this peak time.

Seamless implementation

This was a complex solution across multiple channels, including 9 websites, 86 terminals, several merchant accounts and integrated point-of-sale. The Elavon team were onsite on day one to oversee the transition ensuring all operations ran smoothly - Elavon proudly received full marks.
